

Mae Walker raised 4 children and spent 37 years serving AT&T customers before she retired. Now, Mae has been diagnosed with cancer and...

AT&T wants to cut Mae's health care

After Mae's 37 years of dedicated service, AT&T wants to make her health care unaffordable just when she needs it the most.

Mae isn't alone. This is the story of thousands of workers who have retired from AT&T. Mae and all of these retirees need your help.

*The employee's name has been changed to respect her privacy.

A Healthy Company with Sick Ideas

AT&T remains a healthy corporation in a sick economy, with profits of $12.9 billion in 2008 and millions to executives, all on the backs of over 250,000 active and retired workers.

Go to www.StandUpForWorkers.com and tell AT&T that cutting retiree healthcare is sick!
