

IT'S A SIDE OF
AT&T TOO MANY AMERICANS ARE SEEING.

It's a betrayal. AT&T is turning its back on American workers in communities across the country. The company has outsourced tens of thousands of our telecommunications jobs in recent years, and more are at risk. Seems like AT&T would rather exploit cheap foreign labor than give American workers a fair chance.

Right now, AT&T is planning to eliminate over 1,000 U.S. customer service jobs. The layoffs could hit by the end of the month — unless AT&T realizes that it's wrong to hand out work to people in India and the Philippines while handing out pink slips at home. AT&T makes big profits here, including millions off government contracts, so it has a responsibility to keep good jobs here too.

Tell AT&T: Don't turn your back on US.
