

CWA Answers "The West Wing"

This Wednesday night, April 28, you'll see CWA's President on the hit TV series "The West Wing" for the second week in a row fighting the offshoring of good American jobs. In last week's West Wing episode, CWA was featured prominently in the plotline as our President battled to save thousands of computer programming jobs from going overseas, and also raising our concerns over media concentration with the fictional White House staff.

It's rare for a union to get this kind of positive exposure on mainstream TV. CWA's starring role on this popular show is testimony to our union's political clout and reputation in Washington as a leading force for workers.

This week the "real" CWA will answer "The West Wing." President Bahr will be featured in a 30-second commercial which will be shown sometime between 9-10 p.m. EDT. The ad highlights CWA's efforts to protect high-tech jobs.

Please tell your friends, particularly those in the information industries and watch "The West Wing" Wednesday, April 28.

The commercial this Wednesday will appear in these 23 TV markets: Atlanta, Boston, Charleston, W.Va., Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dallas, Denver, Des Moines, Los Angeles, Miami, Minneapolis, New York, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Portland, Ore., Raleigh, San Antonio, San Francisco, Seattle, St. Louis, and Washington, D.C.

With the loss of almost 3 million jobs during the Bush presidency, outsourcing is a huge issue in this year's campaign. Our candidate John Kerry has a plan and a commitment to create 10 million jobs. George Bush has a record of failure and no plan.

Tune in Wednesday night (9 p.m. Eastern time, check listings). Support CWA-COPE. And help put a pro-worker administration into the real West Wing next January.

In Unity – Strength & Solidarity:

Steve Tisza, President
