

Our health care system is broken. It may be working for greedy insurance and drug companies – but it sure is not working for workers, retirees or employers. What ails the system can't be fixed at the bargaining table. We must elect candidates who will reform our nation's health care system so that we all have health care we can count on.

But do you know what the candidates are proposing? We've developed a fun tool to help you learn about Barack Obama and John McCain's health care plans. The CWA Health Care Challenge puts the candidates on stage as you match each candidate to the policy he supports and identify which policies support CWA's principles for health care reform. Play the game now – the results may surprise you!

Over the past few months, CWA's Health Care for All campaign has trained thousands of members who are taking the message of health care reform to their locals and communities. The Health Care Challenge is just one of the tools that we developed as part of this training that are now available on our website.

When you visit healthcarevoices.org you will also be able to create an electronic postcard. We will be delivering these postcards to members of Congress after the election to let them know that we will be holding them accountable as Congress and the White House debate how to reform the health care system.

The problems plaguing health care in the United States cannot be solved by any one employer, or by a single labor union. The fact is, employees, employers, and unions like CWA all have a mutual interest in making our health care system work for all Americans.
